Easy to Use

- A System/Business Analyst can create users, roles and transactions and leave the rules to be built by the developers.
- A set of rules can be created and shared by multiple transactions.
- Rules can be made up of SQLs, Stored Procedures, PL SQLs in case of Oracle or any external programs that can run in a java compatible platform. The external calls in the rules can send and receive parameters..
- The transactions can be PO Receipt to Stock,, Material Transfer, Customer Order Pick etc., or any similar transactions
- Roles decide what transactions a user will have access to.

A business consultant who knows the requirement can quickly create a prototype and if he/she has skills to write SQLs , he/she can easily build a system which will be very easy to analyze for testing various business scenarios by making changes without having to depend on a programmer. This
